CORYPHÉE: Leading for Equity, Diversity and Inclusion in the Arts

DESCRIPTION

This 1.5-day session will invite participants to gain knowledge, engage in dialogue and build skills to recognize and respond to the historic and contemporary systems of exclusion and inequity that shape our societal structures, our organizations and our individual lived experiences in the US. We will use film, small group dialogue, presentations, and group activities to build knowledge and the tools of analysis to assess how the norms, policies, practices and assumptions of our art forms challenge or uphold systemic inequity and exclusion.

OBJECTIVES

- Build the framework and capacity for learning through dialogue;
- Examine social identities through the lens of diversity, inclusion and equity;
- Understand how historical and contemporary manifestations of power and privilege intersect with social identities to uphold structural and institutional inequity in US society;
- Examine how we learn implicit bias, internalized superiority and internalized inferiority; identify ways to recognize and unlearn implicit biases;
- Examine the role of ally in social and organizational change;
- Identify the myths and forms of resistance in this work;
- Examine how inequity shows up in our arts organizations;
- Assess the practices and norms of ballet and other art forms to identify those that support equity and inclusion and those that perpetuate inequity and exclusion and recommend changes.
